FAREWELL, TONY THE TIGER

BIG CHILDREN'S ICON PASSED.

Tony the Tiger was found dead in his penthouse by Tammy the Mistress the day after New Year's. Forensics say he died from a milk overdose. He was found dead in his penthouse by Tammy the Mistress the day after New Year's. Forensics say he died from a milk overdose. Tammy the Mistress reported that they got drunk on milk together from New Year's Eve through the countdown and left early in the morning. She went back the next day and found that his big, furry chest wasn't moving as it always was.

Tony the Tiger, was the great icon for Frosted Flakes cereal. He brought joy to children and forced them to play sports when they were lazy. He saved a lot of kids from obesity which saved a lot of adults from being obese from childhood.

He was always energetic around the children as he encouraged them to be healthy. Some say that children were his drug. But as we all know, the cereal business has been going down ever since the launch of candy bars in 2012. Friend, Cap'n Crunch said, with no disrespect to the Tiger's reputation, that "He was depressed ever since the children stopped eating cereal. He was a drunk. Some nights he drank 10 cartons and some mornings he drank 15. It was hard seeing him like that. I wish I could've stopped him."

*"Some nights
he drank 10 cartons and some mornings
he drank 15."*

Why Tammy the Mistress had been with Tony, we do not know. His friends told us that he had been blowing them off to hang around a lot of ladies instead of going to parties and charities. Was Tony really losing his grip? The facts point to yes, but he's done so much for the world. Who's to blame? Tony? Tammy? The food industry? Life? Whoever or whatever it is, it doesn't matter... we can't bring Tony back to life. May you rest in peace, Tony the Tiger. You will be remembered.

SPOTTED*Q*How did you and Stefan meet?*A

Well, we first met at Dracula's Christmas Party. I mean, I didn't think Dracula would invite another group of vampires other than my family. The second I met Stefan, I just felt a negative vibe coming from him. I don't know, I guess first impression wise; he didn't make it on my 'I Like You' list. But anyway, after the party, we bumped into each other more often and I can't believe I'm saying this, but I hated him so much. But, a part of me was attracted to him. Even at the party I noticed a resemblance between him and Justin Bieber, aka, my idol. Long story short, Stefan and I started off as friends and things just fell into place. A really good place.

Q

How does your family feel about Stefan?

A

They don't like him at all. Maybe it's because he doesn't sparkle in the sun—I don't know. Last weekend, we all went hunting together and my family didn't speak to him at all. It was terrible. I think they believe that Stefan's breed of vampires are cruel and not humane, which is ironic don't you think? The word 'vampire' and 'humane' shouldn't even be seen together. They just need more time to get to know him and I seriously hope they start liking him soon cause it driving me insane dealing with their complaints.

Q

Where does this leave you and Bella?

A

It's hard to say. Bella is still trying to process everything. I feel like she saw it coming—saw our relationship just falling apart. She didn't seem too devastated when I told her about Stefan, but then again, I could never read her properly. I don't know, I think she's seeing another vampire... Not just any vampire, but Stefan's brother, Damon. We aren't really talking right now.

Q&A

An exclusive interview with Stefan Salvatore
Edward Cullen

From Bromance to Romance

Stefan Spills
to Aubrey Van Aken

Q

It was rumoured last year that both you and Edward didn't get along and even had a brutal fight at Last Drop Bar. Was that true?

A

Unfortunately, yes, that rumour was absolutely true. Edward and I were both equally known as 'heroic' vampires and it was always a constant argument of who was better. Our only objective was to win everyone's heart and be ranked as the better vampire. Sometime during the summer last year, Edward and I had a little too much blood to drink and well—let's say the night ended off with bite marks, foul curse words and driving in a police car. Last year, everything was different. I was different.

Q

How did Elena react to your sudden interest in men?
Specifically Edward Cullen?

A

Oh man, the night she found out was just terrible. I was actually going to tell her myself, but she found a deer in the backyard with two different bite marks on both sides. God, not to mention the strawberry scented candles on the deck. She confronted me at once and insisted on knowing who the other woman was. I couldn't lie to her. So when I told her that I had feelings for Edward she simply laughed in my face. I will never forget the words she told me that night. She said, "I was right. I should tell Bella that I won the bet."

Q

What qualities did Edward have that instantly had you head over heels?

A

Where do I begin! The way his hair resembled mine, his lucky gold fang, the way his face would almost appear rocklike whenever he's starving, and of course how can I forget, his sparkly skin. I mean, I burn in the sun, but Edward, he looks like a princess who just finished swimming in a pool of glitter. Or fairy dust. Man, he's amazing.

WHAT ARE THE HEROES UP TO NOW ... LET ME TELL YOU WHAT I DUG UP!

Ring Shopping For a Special Wizard or For a Little Hobbit?

Has Frodo's Ring addiction come back?

The idea of Hermione Granger and Frodo Baggins dating is still a shock to many people. The same old questions are always fired like, "How is it possible to kiss with the major height difference and all?" "Who wears the pants in the relationship?" "Does Hermione push Frodo around since he's so tiny?" "Do they actually like each other or is it for publicity?" You get the idea. Well, if you guys are still trying to process the fact that they are an item, wait until you hear this. Hermione and Frodo were seen together at Legolas's Ring store in Bristol after Harry Potter's surprise birthday party. That's right. A Ring store. Some may steer more towards the word 'Marriage' but others will probably think, "Addiction."

Sometime last year, Frodo Baggins told us about his ring addiction. It wasn't just one particular ring that he loved, but anything that he could wear around his finger. Birthstone rings, iron rings, children rings, butterfly rings, eternity rings, mood rings, purity rings, thumb rings—So basically anything circular with a radius of 13.22mm. He spent a couple of nights in jail because apparently he jumped a toddler after school for a ring-pop. When we asked him whether it was true, he responded with:

"I didn't jump him. I asked him nicely if I could have his ring, and he said no. I asked him again and he still refused to give it to me. Like, I didn't understand what his deal was. It wasn't like I towered over him or anything. He was an inch taller than me anyway, so I didn't get what the problem was. So in the end, I threw myself at the ring and he happened to fall down. And my fist accidentally hit his face. Twice. I didn't jump him."

Frodo's looks a little wary ... you feeling okay buddy?

Right Frodo... Cause throwing yourself at someone in an aggressive way, not to mention, punching them, isn't considered 'jumping.' It was even rumoured that he was forming a sudden interest in Fruit Loops, Cheerios and onion ring crisps. Hmm... Should we be concerned? I'm sure Frodo has regrets just like all of us. Well, it's a good thing he went to rehab for a couple of months for this addiction of his. He was released a few days ago from the rehab clinic and our young wizard, Hermione, has been a supportive girlfriend throughout it all. No wonder everyone loves her! She's such a doll.

It's really hard to decide whether Frodo wants to give someone else a ring or if it's for himself. Maybe he'll finally commit to an actual person instead of a ring. Or should I say rings. Well, I'm definitely Team Fromionie so there better be a Hobbit/Wizard wedding! I guess we'll find out soon if our Herowood sweethearts will become Mr and Mrs. Baggingrang-er.

NO MORE VILLAINS = NO MORE HEROES?

The bad citizens of the world are becoming good citizens?

An outbreak... or should I say an inbreak of villains in jail has occurred. All around the world, villains are turning themselves in left, right, and centre. There has been some speculation as to why this is happening, but are there definitive answers?

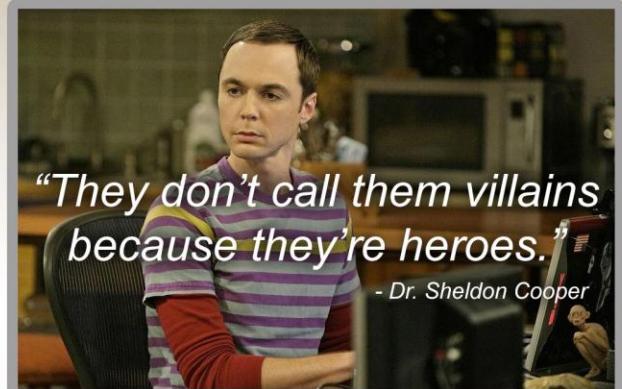

After interviewing many different heroes, the general word around this is that the villains all banded together for some evil plot twist. Dr. Sheldon Cooper said, "Villains will always be villains. Why do you think they're called villains? They don't call them villains because they're heroes. That would be stupid."

The Green Goblin leaving the Grand Canyon Hotel and Spiderman checking out of the exact same hotel an hour later. Is there a connection?

Other than asking the heroes, we decided to get the other side of the story. We went to Alcatraz, a.k.a. the "Go-to-Hell, Criminals Island", where many of the greatest bad guys locked themselves up. On TV and in films nowadays, the stereotypical prison contains buff men, all yelling and hooting at any visitors, but during the visit, there seemed to be none of that. Walking through the halls of the cells and the visiting rooms, none of them seemed to notice the presence of good. So was it safe to say that they, too, were good?

Upon the visit, Wolverine was seen visiting Magneto and they were jamming together! My, what a rare sight to see.

"It just makes no sense. Without them, there would be no us," said Aquaman when he stopped to speak to us right before he entered the Seafood Diner.

Although 89% of the 9824 defenders we interviewed in the past month have said that the villains are plotting something, 8% said they were rooting for them, but 3% had no comment. Is the 3% also in on the plan?

We stopped Spiderman to tell us his opinion on the situation, but he webbed his way out of the recorder in his face. When stopping Spiderman, he was actually leaving the Grand Canyon Hotel, the same hotel we saw the kiler Green Goblin leaving 2 hours before him. Was it a coincidence these two were seen at the same hotel on the same day, or were they together at the time of question?

Wolverine, good guy, and Magneto, former bad guy, jamming on instruments together on Alcatraz island.

We also sat down with Saruman, the evil wizard who tried to take over the world with sour apples, and he explained his reason for such a spontaneous decision. "I got tired of it all. The planting of the seeds, the watering of the growing trees, waiting years and years for those apple trees to grow... I can live longer than anyone else, but not that long..." and he let out a few coughs. Surely, he wasn't lying? "I don't have the strength to keep growing them apples. And Gandalf keeps stealing them to make naturally sour candy... my evil doings has put smiles on the faces of children. I guess that makes me happy. I should probably be Saweetuman now." The world hopefully doesn't have to worry about Granny Smith's apples burning their eyes anymore, but that doesn't mean they don't have to worry about creeps in masks at night. Every prison in the world is full and the remaining villains who have tried to put themselves into one have not succeeded. Officials aren't allowing any more to enter the cells because they are maxed out with 1 guard per 10 inmates. Also, there isn't enough funding because no one ever expected the imprisonment rate to go this high.

"My evil doings has put smiles on the faces of children."

- Saruman

Those remaining villains have gone into solitude in their own lairs, some grouping together, playing poker and other various card games to pass the time.

Even though there is a high number of no-longer-evil-doers, it's not the whole population. In fact, 66% of these outlaws have not been in the public for more than three weeks. There has been absolutely no sign of them. You might even think twice before saying that they ever existed!

We visited Joker, the former havoc-wreaker of playing card decks, at his apartment. He told us that he hadn't seen his colleagues for over a year. I asked him if it was possible that they left him out of their devious plan and he insisted that it was impossible, but we saw a gleam of sadness in his eyes.

With criminals M.I.A., justice has found it hard to prevail. Yelling indoors has become a sin and coughing has been considered an act of terrorism.

A woman was arrested for scolding her child who had eaten an unpaid grape at a grocery store. The child was also arrested for stealing the tiny piece of fruit. On the other side of the world, a homeless man received a ticket for being homeless and the ticket-giving officer was suspended for being cruel.

C'mon heroes! Get those villains out there before we get arrested for printing a magazine!

Is there a master plan behind this sudden turn of events? Has evil gone good? Find out with us in next month's issue!

The Joker lookin' charming in his new police uniform without his creepy clown makeup!

JACK DAWSON: HERO? OR CRIMINAL?

By: Kithana T, the Ocean Journalist

Is he the reason for the death of the passengers of the Titanic?

The Oceanic Flight 815 survivors are alive after being stranded in the middle of nowhere for six months. If it wasn't for our hero, Jack Dawson, they wouldn't be back in Los Angeles right now. But, then again, if it wasn't for Jack, the smoke monster wouldn't have boarded the Titanic. Jack has been taken into interrogation by Detective James Carter and Inspector Lee. When we asked Decretive Carter about Jack's status, he told Winners Only, "Dawson has a court hearing next week. The smoke monster killed almost two thousand passengers. Jesus, that's a lot of people. The ship was destroyed as if Mother Nature went on an angry rampage or was seriously PMSing—it was just horrible."

A lot of families blame Jack for the death of the passengers on the Titanic. On an exclusive interview with Jack, he told us, "If you were looking out into the ocean and saw an island with thick smoke in the air, wouldn't you think it's a signal from someone who needs help? I was right, people were stranded on the island, but I didn't think there was a smoke monster living on the land as well." According to many survivors of the Titanic, including the Oceanic Flight 815 survivors, the smoke monster was targeting everyone but Jack Dawson. Do Dawson and the smoke monster have some kind of secret alliance? It is definitely something to think about.

How is it possible for a cloud of smoke to destroy the ship that was claimed to be unsinkable?

When interviewing Kate Austin, one of the survivors of Oceanic Flight 815, she told us, "The smoke monster has always targeted us back on the island. I was surprised it didn't attack Mr. Dawson because that thing is always so angry. The poor kid helped us and I don't think everyone should be so hard on him. I mean, it's not his fault the ship sank. I mean, for all we know, the ship could have crashed into an ice berg. If it wasn't for him, we wouldn't be back home." Kate is clearly on Jack's team, but John Locke's seems to contradict her positive words. "We were never meant to leave the island. Because of this stupid boy, more than a thousand people are lying somewhere in the Atlantic

"I don't think what I did was wrong. Why can people see that?!"

Ocean. We crashed on the island for a reason. It was destiny. Either he takes us back or he can rot behind bars. It's his fault," John tells us. John was furious that day and he made it obvious by storming into a nearby forest behind St. Paul's church.

Now getting to the most important question: Where is the smoke monster now? The smoke monster is nowhere to be seen. Some think it went down with the Titanic, but others believe it's in our sewage waiting to strike. The FBI and LAPD are in search of the smoke monster in case it happened to settle down in Los Angeles. Having no idea of where the smoke monster is makes Jack's case harder to fight for. To make things worse, the heroes are not looking forward to fighting the smoke monster either. Harry Potter and his friends are trying to come up with a spell to freeze the smoke monster while Sheldon and Avatar Aang figure out Plan A-Z. They are trying to prepare before hand in case the smoke monster is in fact in LA.

Jack is avoiding being seen in public because lately, he's been receiving a lot of hate mail, not to mention a couple of threats as well. He is hated by everyone and hopefully, the heat will wear off. Detective Carter and Inspector Lee are monitoring him 24/7 to make sure nothing bad happens. Or is it because they think Jack and the monster planned this all out... Is Jack a hero or should he locked up?

We have to give a lot of credit to Detective James Carter and Inspector Lee for helping out with this investigation!

The passengers of Oceanic Flight 815 are finally back home! But their rescue resulted in the death of more than a thousand people...

Interview With A Villain

with Nikail
Richie

A Moment in Time with VOLDEMORT

Each issue, we get an interview with a villain because we like to give the losers a moment in the spotlight. This month, we decided to sit down with Voldemort and have a chat. This particular villain, or should I say, ex-villain, has much to say and prove to the world.

Heroes, you could learn a thing or two from Voldemort about that special enemy you have in mind!

NR: As a famous villain, what made you want to be interviewed?

V: Well, I just wanted to get my feelings out. Everyone is afraid of me and no one will talk to me.

NR: Well, I welcome you, and am not afraid of you.

V: You should be.

What?

V: I'm sorry. I've been accustomed to being evil.

NR: Ah.. ok. So this whole feud between you and Harry Potter, the Boy Who Just Wouldn't Die... what's been going on there?

V: We've been fighting for years. Yes, I used magic to make him pee himself at school when he was 10, but we were just fooling around. I didn't mean to hurt anyone in the process. I told him I wanted to talk, but every time that happened, he fell to the ground and stared at me in fear. When a face like that is staring right at you, you've got to laugh, right? Right?

NR: Uh.. yeah, I guess.

V: So I've been trying to apologize to him, but he's trying to kill me. He's going around looking for all of my childhood toys to threaten me... and I really love those items. I grew up with them. Knowing me, an orphan, I, of course, only had toys to play with. No friends, no family. It was a hard life. I used to pretend that I had a mother by putting a dress in the chair next to me, but the other kids thought I wanted to wear the dress... it was terrible. Then I found Harry. He liked to play games with me. I hadn't had that much fun since never!

NR: Aside from your intentions, do you plan on doing anything with your looks? I mean, they say beauty is skin deep, but we all know that's not true. So do you plan on doing any plastic surgery? You know, to make your face a less feared one?

V: No... I'm beautiful the way I am. The smaller the nose, the better. I'm not ashamed of who I am. Harry... well, he's hairy. No matter how much he cuts his hair, it keeps growing back! But me, I am so very blessed that no matter how hard I try to grow it out, it won't grow out because I don't have to worry about unnecessary time-spending on such a worthless part of the human body.

NR: So you have no hair whatsoever?

V: Yes. None upstairs, none downstairs. I'm biologically naked.

NR: Do you mind giving the world your opinion on the recent situation with villains turning themselves in?

V: Yes, I do mind, but... I'll say it anyways. I think you should just give us a chance. People can change, can't they? As my friend, Ben Chang, says at every occasion, "Chang yourself, Chang the world." I'm right here and I haven't hurt anyone, so far. So if I can be good, so can others. That is all I have to say.
